“How soon marriage counseling sessions would end if husbands and wives were competing in thoughtful self-denial. If the woman were anxious to yield to her God-given head in the home, and the man were ambitious to serve her comfort and welfare as being his own flesh, there would be no room for contention and strife. ‘Wives, submit,’ and, ‘husbands, love,’ must be repeated until the message reaches beyond ears to the hearts of spouses.”

~Walter Chantry

“When two people know, accept, and fulfill their varying but complementary responsibilities, oneness in marriage is promoted.”

~Wayne Mack

“When a husband and wife walk in the Spirit and fulfill their core roles, they complement one another, bring unity to their marriage, joy to their hearts, a reversal of the Fall and proof they are being recreated by Christ.”

~Randy Smith

“Man and woman are one in essence. That is to say, Adam and Eve are equal in dignity, value, and glory. In essential unity there is absolutely no room for inferiority of person. The man and woman are equal in every respect except one – authority. Two different tasks are given to people of equal value and dignity. In the economy of marriage, only the job descriptions are different.”

~R. C. Sproul
